Service Learning Collaboratory: Digital Storytelling with the Mayerson Foundation, Riverview High School, and Deer Park High school

The SLCE course, taught in collaboration with the Communication Department, School of Information Technology, and Journalism Department connected UC students with high school students and university faculty with high school faculty to create digital stories that captured the service learning work happening in the region.

The Service Learning Collaboratory model explores how Service Learning can span a wide variety of industries and disciplines. The course sought to disrupt the boundaries among teachers, learners, and communities and dissolve the dichotomy between for-profit and not-for-profit organizations.

CASE WORKSHOP

Third-year University of Cincinnati junior Chelse Spinner (Biology) and fifth-year senior Robert Settles (Civil) participated in the Catalyzing Advocacy in Science and Engineering (CASE) workshop in Washington, D.C., where they learned tools for effective communication and civic engagement around science and engineering at the federal level. Recipients of the McNair Scholarship, these students were nominated to participate in this conference by UC faculty members.

The goal of this program is to help upperclassmen and graduate students “learn about the structure and organization of Congress, the federal budget and appropriations processes, and tools for effective science communication and civic engagement.” They remind people that scientist play a large role in shaping national science and education policy in the political realm.
